3.11 CHESS CLUB

3.11.1 Introduction

Playing chess has proven to help students enhance their creativity, improve their power of concentration, develop and expand critical thinking skills, boost memory and retention, and achieve superior academic performance

Chess has long been considered a way to increase student mental prowess, concentration, memory, and analytical skills. Chess is an excellent tool to demonstrate the theme of critical thinking. The formulation of a plan entails that the player must not only reflect on how similar problems are solved but also the player must perform a systematic checking of possible combinations of moves and then arrive at an evaluation of each line. The process is a mental exercise where pieces are envisioned to be moving from square to square and the player reflects on the characteristics of the position to finally produce a reasoned outcome (move). This is precisely the definition of critical thinking.

“Visual stimuli tend to improve memory more than any other stimuli; chess is definitely an excellent memory exerciser the effects of which are transferable to other subjects where memory is necessary.”

3.12 SPORTS CLUB

3.12.1 Introduction

Sports club encourages our students to develop their sports skills in various outdoor and indoor games like Football, Cricket, Basketball, Ball Badminton Courts, Kabaddi, and Volley ball, Athletics, Chess, Carrom, Table Tennis, Shuttle, Physical Fitness Program (conducted in Gym), Power Lifting and Weight Lifting. Our college has grounds and equipments for each of these sports. The club also encourages the students to participate in Inter College and Intra College sports competitions.

Through the development of healthy physical activity habits, students are not only supporting healthy bodies, but are also likely to show improved performance in college. Another terrific advantage of sport clubs – which generally involve a long term commitment – is that if young people are physically active from an early age, they are more likely to continue to be so in early adulthood. Structured activities, such as organized sports, are linked to lower levels of antisocial behavior in students. Indeed, sport clubs can help them develop important social skills such as good citizenship, positive peer relations and respect for authority through learning to interact not only with other children their age, but also with older individuals in their coaches and sports officials. Studies have shown that those who engage in sport and physical activity are more confident – this is particularly important in child development.

Sport clubs allow students to build self-esteem as they learn to trust in their own abilities, receive encouragement and praise from coaches and parents, and learn to accept constructive criticism. Sport clubs provide an opportunity for students to learn skills that will help them in college, as well as in their future careers and personal relationship. Through engagement in sport, they learn leadership, teamwork, problem-solving, responsibility, self-discipline, and a sense of initiative. Sport clubs help students – especially those who are disadvantaged – build last friendships and feel part of a wider community. By bringing together individuals from different

4. ANALYSIS AND OUTCOME

Extracurricular clubs in college span across an extensive range of interests, giving students enough flexibility and positive impact on their social life. The students were able to identify their strengths, weaknesses, interests, and goals. Acquiring skills is imperative while participating in multiple activities, you can learn how to effectively interact with others. Broaden your skillset such as work ethics, time management, and communication, and enhance those you already possess. Maintaining a well-balanced experience in college will enhance students' academic performance. Take a break from studies and join a club that matches your interests. A different environment with like-minded people and fun activities will give you that much-needed change while keeping the students healthy. Participating in extra-curricular activities can assist the students with a well-balanced and stimulating campus life. The students would have gained skills, make connections, and broaden their knowledge.
