Summary of the event

Under DBT STAR college scheme, 2 day National Symposium was conducted on February 26th and 27th of this year with grand success. The event was designed to instil the importance of research in the young minds and to nourish and nurture their skills to become future scientists. The broad areas which were covered in the symposium were literature reviews, systematic reviews, research methods, managing data and other such related topics.

It began with a formal inauguration with a cordial welcome address by Prof. Dr. V. Rajendran, principal, Dr. N.G.P. Arts and Science College, Coimbatore. The chief guests for the occasion were Prof. Dr. Roshan Delabandara, Secretary, Nutrition Society of Sri Lanka. The guests of honour were Dr. A.V. Gnanasambadam, Chief Executive officer, TNAU, Coimbatore and Dr. T. Poongodi Vijaykumar, Periyar University, Salem. The above two members delivered lectures as the keynote speakers. Dr. S.S. Sudha, the DBT STAR College Scheme Co-ordinator proposed the vote of thanks which marked the end of the inaugural session and the beginning of the symposium.

Following this, in the afternoon, the session was purely technical where the young researchers who were all under graduate students presented their findings with lot of enthusiasm and confidence awaiting exciting rewards. More than 50 students from different disciplines like Botany, Zoology, Physics, Chemistry, Mathematics, Biochemistry, Biotechnology and Microbiology participated in the symposium. The peer group of students posed interesting questions which each of the participant took it up as a challenge and did their best to answer the questions as a dynamic defense session.

The second day began with a lecture session by the key note speaker Dr. Varadharaju Chandrasekar, MD, Bioline Laboratory and Research Institute and continued with enriched sessions of deliberations by the students. Some colleges which participated in the symposium are Lady Doak College from Madhurai, PSG College of Arts, Hindustan College of Arts and Science, Nanda College of Arts and Science from Perumanallur, Navarasam College of Arts and Science from Arasur are some of the few colleges. Students presented their findings in front of the judges and the jury decided to award three awards as first, second and third prizes to the internal students from Dr. N.G.P. Arts and Science college and yet another three prizes to the students who participated from outside colleges. The prizes were distributed in the category of basic sciences, bio sciences and applied sciences which was bagged by both outside participants and internal participants.

The event came to a close on the second day evening with a formal valedictory function. The welcome address was given by Prof. Dr. V. Rajendran, Principal, Dr. N.G.P. Arts and Science College, Coimbatore. The guest for the valedictory address was Dr. Dr. Varadharaju Chandrasekar, MD, Bioline Laboratory and Research Institute, Coimbatore who delivered the valedictory address. Interesting feedback was received from the students who appreciated for creating an avenue for express their innovations. Formal vote of thanks by Dr. Renga Ramanujam, Head, Department of Microbiology drew the curtains down for the event which marked a grand success of one of its kind.

Dr. Varadharaju Chandrasekar, MD, Bioline Laboratory and Research Institute also delivered a scintillating note to encourage and motive the students on the importance of research.

Abstract

Single crystals of tetramethylammonium cadmium chloride were grown by slow evaporation technique. The single-crystal X-ray diffraction revealed that the crystal belongs to hexagonal crystal system with  $P6_3/m$  space group. The crystalline nature of the grown crystal was measured by power X-ray diffraction. The presence of functional groups was identified using Fourier transform infrared and Fourier transform Raman studies. The optical absorption studies showed that the grown crystal transmit most of the incident radiation in the range of 200–800 nm. The diamagnetic property of the grown crystal has been analyzed by vibrating sample magnetometer. The mechanical stability of crystal is analyzed by Vickers microhardness study. Dielectric measurements were taken to analyze the dielectric constant and dielectric loss at different frequencies and temperatures. The thermal stability of grown crystals was confirmed by thermogravimetry/differential thermal analysis. Thermal stability of the compound was entered up to 208 °C.

Introduction

In recent years, the novel organic–inorganic hybrid materials have been widely used for data communication, sensing, spin-crossover and signal processing applications due to their desirable properties [1–4]. Hence, the growing of good single crystals of organic–inorganic materials is very much needed for variety of technical and economic purpose. An enormous amount of opportunities exist for developing this technology in various fields including electronic devices and electro-optical devices [5]. The single crystals have a wide range of applications such as harmonic frequency generators, optoelectronics, acoustic–optic modulators, magnetic devices, data storage devices, piezoelectric devices, holographic and laser devices [6, 7]. Crystals with general chemical formula  $[N(CH_3)_4]_2 MX_4$  belong to tetramethylammonium groups have  $A_2BX_4$  type are mainly studied for their distinctive properties [8]. These types of materials possess various functionalities, physical and chemical properties, which can be changed using metal ions with various organic ligands. All these compounds undergo several structural phase transitions as the temperature decreases. However, they have been studied in the interest of their architecture and systematize of animate combinations of organo-metallic and metal coordination complexes [9, 10]. The crystals of tetramethylammonium manganese chloride have been investigated for their quasi-one-dimensional magnetic property [11]. Tetramethylammonium chloride-based crystals were widely studied as model compounds, and their corresponding structural phase transitions in tetramethylammonium cadmium chloride were studied by means of adiabatic calorimeter

ABSTRACT

Nano ZnO has been synthesized at different pH values using chemical precipitation technique. The X-ray diffraction pattern shows the hexagonal wurtzite phase of ZnO nanoparticles. The crystallite size is found to decrease with increasing the pH value. From FE-SEM analysis, it can understand with increasing the pH value from 8 to 12, the morphology of ZnO nanoparticles changed from hexagonal faceted structure to nanospheroid structure. The HRTEM images are in well accordance with the FE-SEM images. The average particle size of nanospheroid morphology is 31.1 nm. The SAED pattern confirms the crystalline nature with multifaceted growth of the samples. EDAX spectrum of ZnO nanoparticles at different pH values confirms the formation of Zn and O. The absorption spectrum of ZnO nanoparticles shows that the absorbance band is slightly shifted towards the lower wavelength with increasing the pH value. The band gap energy values (by Tauc plot relation) of the ZnO nanoparticles are found in the range of 3.0–3.03 eV. FTIR spectra revealed the presence of the characteristic stretching vibrational band of Zn-O bonding at 445–418 cm<sup>-1</sup> and this is shifted to lower frequency with increasing the pH value from 8 to 12. PL spectra of ZnO nanoparticles at various pH values exhibit a strong UV emission band and green emission band. The most intense green emission band is obtained for ZnO nanoparticles at pH12. The synthesized nanoparticles show potential antibacterial activity against Gram-positive (B. subtilis and S. aureus) and Gram-negative bacteria (P. aeruginosa and K. pneumoniae). The cytotoxicity of ZnO nanoparticles at pH12 was evaluated against Normal (L929) and Breast cancer cell line (MB231).

1. Introduction

ZnO semiconductor material has drawn much interest in recent days due to their unique application in various field of research such as gas sensors, highly functional photoelectron devices, catalysts and effective devices like laser devices which are common nowadays [1]. Zinc oxide (ZnO) has a large scope for various research groups as being wide band gap energy (3.37 eV) in a semiconductor with excellent electrical and optical properties. Zinc oxide nanostructures have an appreciable advantage in the catalytic

Abstract: Phyto- compounds are chemical compounds that are produced by plants. Thousands of phytochemical compounds are produced by naturally that are non-essential aspect originate in the plant nutriment. All the plant parts clamp the presence of phyto-compounds like leaves, vegetables and roots and play an important role in defence mechanism against environmental threats. Currently modern medicines practices the use of phyto-compounds for producing various medicines hence the importance of meaningful the action of each compounds are vary essential. In this study we investigate the innumerable phytochemical compounds present in Hemigraphis Colorata via GC - MS analysis.

Key words: Medicinal plants, Phito-chemical compounds.

1. Introduction

Nowadays Plant based treatments and medicines are playing vital role in the area of Ayurveda. Supreme of populates believing Ayurveda outstanding to the non-side effects of the treatment. Due to the era of modern life style nature will unnatural desperately and new life style illnesses are being happened. Largely peoples depending modern treatments because of the lack of time and betrothed life panaches. The history of "herbalism" is closely tied with the history of medicine from prehistoric times up until the growth of the germ theory of disease in the 19th century. Plants have been used for medical treatments during the human history, and such traditional medicine is still widely used today.

Hemigraphis colorata is a tropical perennial herb chiefly grown as an ornamental indoor and outdoor plant, because of its attractive and vivid foliage. In folk medicine, the leaves are ground into a paste and applied on fresh cut wounds to promote wound healing and used to treat anaemia. Traditional knowledge regarding the usage of this plant differs but the scientific study available to support this knowledge is much limited (Devi Priya, 2013). Medicinal plants used as medicine should therefore be studied for safety and efficacy. Gas

Abstract— Earlier, location based services (LBS) where just an information and entertainment service that assist users to determine the geographical position through a mobile device. But the recent advancement on LBS is getting predominantly high on scale. This renovation leads us to create more efficient and intelligent systems on user queries. One such advancement is Spatial Keyword Query Processing (SKQP) that takes both location and textual description as input and gives the best results. In order to further improve the result we focus on embedding user preferences to the returned results. Therefore the resultant set will not only be the best but also user's favorite choice. The aim of this paper is to analyze the challenges and opportunities to incorporate the objective.

Keywords— spatial keyword query, user preferences, user priorities, location based services.

I. INTRODUCTION

Increasing demand of spatial data heads us to develop life changing services such as pre-planned touring, live updates, shopping alert, targeted ads and many high-end responsive systems. Users of the web often submit geographical enquiries requesting information about, for example, services relating to retailing, tourist attractions, accommodation, sport, entertainment, transport, public services and cultural heritage [2]. Therefore service providers become more competitive and researchers focus on improving the methods day by day.

Recently, Tata Teleservices confirmed that it finds huge demand for Location Based Services in India. Tata Teleservices is betting big on the strength of its network across India to carve out its own unique space in the enterprise arena. As Indian mobile market is splurging to make tremendous growth and improvement in retail industry, location-based marketing enables retailers to better influence their customers and engage them.

In addition, the popularization of social networking, the evolution of networks such as 4G and 5G, and the evolution of the Internet of Things (IOT) are some of the factors that are expected to drive the growth of the global location-based services market during the forecast period.

In the existing methods constantly we produce the same set of result to all the users. But users exist with different characteristics and preferences. The requirements and liking are different from one to another. For example consider users interest in purchasing books. Each one of them has their own choice of list. So, when people are with different taste and interest we cannot provide the same set of result to everyone. Thus analysis of user preference plays a major role in query results.

Another example is to find a restaurant according to user inclination. If the user likes to explore new things, we can enlist the result focusing on different cuisine that is unfamiliar and brand new to the user. Some users will be habitual, where

Abstract: Background: Colorectal cancer (CRC) also known as bowel cancer is still one of the leading causes of cancer related mortality worldwide. Generally tumor cells are protecting themselves by fibrin coat and it is resistant to fibrinolytic degradation. Such a coated tumor appears as 'self' to the immune system, and thus is not detected as a tumor by the immune system (i.e. natural killer cells). Hence, a potent proteolytic enzyme has to propose/ identify to dissolve the protective fibrin layer, exposing the tumor cell surface to chemotherapy and immune attack. In this research papain was considered to be the potential proteolytic agent, can break down the fibrin coat of cancer cell wall and ultimately the cancer cells are exposed to immune attack and help against the cancer. Secondly, the cytotoxic compound(s) directly deliver to cancer site without harm to normal cells.

Methods: The attempt made to attain this objective, we were designed to fabricate the Papain loaded solid lipid nanoparticles (SLN) by melt dispersion-ultrasonication technique, and investigate the various formulation parameters. The papain loaded SLN was characterized by particle size analysis, zeta potential analysis, differential scanning calorimetry (DSC), Scanning electron microscopy (SEM), drug encapsulation efficiency, in vitro drug release, and in vitro cytotoxicity studies on HT-29 colorectal cancer cells.

Results: The successful outcome of this research was that, the cetyl alcohol based SLN of papain were successfully prepared by using melt dispersion-ultrasonication method with maximum encapsulation efficiency with desired particle size. The release profile of the produced SLN was investigated in phosphate buffer media, and it showed prolonged release during 24 h. The drug release behaviour from the SLNs exhibited a biphasic pattern with the burst release at the initial stage and sustained release subsequently. Future perspective of this research is that need to investigate the SLN for the lymphatic uptake to produce local action on metastatic colorectal cancer. In vitro cell viability for P-SLNs was tested on colorectal Adenocarcinoma HT-29 cells by MTT assay. The results revealed that the in vitro cell viability against different concentrations of papain was 99% and 31 % which were treated with 5 µg/ml and 80 µg/ml concentration respectively. The cell viability of HT-29 cells was decreased significantly from 94 % to 17 % treated with P-SLN at 5 µg/ml and 80 µg/ml concentration respectively. Therefore, the papain loaded SLNs exhibits a better performance on getting lower cell viability (or) equivalent high cytotoxicity than that of pure papain. Therefore, the SLNs delivery system plays a significant role in enhancing the cytotoxic efficacy of papain enzyme against colorectal cancer cells.

Conclusion: In this research, we successfully formulated the P-SLN for the treatment of colorectal cancer therapy. We investigate the various formulation parameters, drug release profile and cytotoxic efficacy of P-SLN. Upon successful completion of this work, P-SLNs delivery system is predictable to produce enhanced cytotoxic efficacy against HT-29 colorectal cancer cells. The papain loaded SLNs can potentially be utilized as a drug delivery system for the treatment of colorectal cancer. In future, we will explore further to investigate the mechanism of anticancer activity and clinical investigation of P-SLN.

Abstract— Computer security is the protection of computing systems and the data that is stored or accessed. It is very important to ensure that the information remains confidential and only those who should access that information can. Username and password alone are insufficient in complex applications. Hence, a strong authentication method such as Biometric authentication method is required to verify one's identity using the unique biological characteristics of an individual. Existing security approaches can be strengthened by one of the behavioral biometric based technique known as Keystroke Dynamics. The main objective of this paper is to explore particularly on Keystroke Dynamics based Authentication (KDA). This technique can be applied in different domains like intrusion detection, online learning and assessment, e-banking etc., to authenticate the users. This paper presents a review of its applications using fixed-text (static passwords) and free-text (continuous). Comparing these two types of keystroke authentication methods, Free-text kind of authentication process was found to be better as it is not limited with username and password during the log-in session; it is continued until the end of the log-on session.

I. INTRODUCTION

Usage of the Internet for online shopping, e-learning, social interactions and net-banking have grown rapidly which poses security as a major concern. Networks are sometimes weak, which are most vulnerable and hijacked easily. Efforts are taken to secure the network through Network topologies and security protocols. The recognition process authenticates the validity of the user to determine if that user is a valid user or not. Authentication is the process of determining whether someone or something is, in fact, who or what it is declared to be. As the dependence upon computers and computer networks grows, the need for authentication has increased. Figure 1 shows the different types of user authentication methods. There are three conventional methods used for authenticating a person. These are possession based, knowledge based, and biometrics based. Possession based includes anything that a 'user must have' in their possession to log in, such as a smart-card, keys, a smart phone or passport etc. Knowledge based include that a 'user must know' in order to log in, such as his user name and password or personal identification number (PIN). Biometrics based includes biometric user data to login. Biometric methods can be further classified based on the physiological and behavioral characteristics of a person. Physiological biometrics are those features that describe 'who the user is' depending on their physical attributes such as fingerprints, face, iris, retina scanning, hand geometry etc. Behavioral biometrics are related to the behavior pattern of a person, such as signature, voice, keystroke, mouse movement, etc.

Although there exist a variety of authentication techniques, Keystroke Dynamics is a powerful behavioral biometric system that involves authenticating a person based on his

Abstract: Computers are used worldwide to automate the processes in educational institutions, business, hospitals, banks, offices, e-commerce etc. Users store and retrieve their personal and official information using computers. Integrity of the confidential information which is stored and retrieved has become a great challenge. Security mechanisms has to be incorporated to prevent unauthorized access of documents. Authentication is one such method that verifies an individual's identity based on the characteristics one can remember (Knowledge based) or based on the objects they possess (Possession based) or based on the physiological or behavioral characteristics (Biometric based). This paper discusses the secured form of authentication technique i.e the biometric based authentication, its advantages and presents an in depth knowledge in various biometric technologies, their applications and research challenges that exist in different biometric authentication techniques.

I. INTRODUCTION

The information security management is the most important issue in the society to ensure the copyrighted information or data. But as of the globalization and the boundless of the web in each corner, Information Technology (IT) related issues are expanding step by step. Wholesale fraud, protection infringement, absence of genuine verification, false characters, fake exchanges, information sniffing and block attempt are the significant worry in the IT related issues.

To ensure and maintain privacy of information, identity verification is carried out for each person who needs to get to that information in each organization. An individual is authenticated to utilize the source or access the information just if his/her character is checked accurately and acknowledged. This is done in view of certain measure like passwords, PINs, Identification (ID) cards, keys etc., in a PC framework. Access controls have been executed utilizing certain innovations including digital signatures, digital certificates, and information encryption services to shield the information from being accessed by unapproved people. These strategies accomplished enhanced security, privacy protection, data integrity and authentication. It is acceptable that the authentication is playing important role in verifying the people by positively confirming that all the persons are who they are claimed to be.

This paper begins with an introduction to biometric authentication in Section II and it also describes the various biometric technologies adopted. Section III presents the applications of biometric authentication techniques and Section IV discusses on the research challenges of biometric authentication techniques and Section V concludes this work.

II. BIOMETRIC AUTHENTICATION

Traditionally authentication system use Knowledge based authentication or Object based authentication methods. Knowledge based authentication is authenticating people through passwords or PINs with their knowledge. Passwords can be easily guessed as people choose their name, birth date or their pet's name etc., as their passwords or PINs. These are subject to brute force attack or dictionary attacks. Object based authentication is authenticating people with their ID cards, smart cards etc. The problem with this type of method is the objects can be duplicated, shared, stolen or even lost [1]. As these two methods have their own drawbacks, they led to the birth of biometric method of authentication which is based on the characteristics of a person (Ex: Face).

Biometric technology identifies people based on their physiological or behavioral characteristics. Biometric authentication is used in computer systems as a form of identification and access control. Many different aspects of human physiology or behavior such as fingerprint recognition, facial recognition, iris recognition, retina scanning, hand geometry, voice recognition, keystroke analysis, signature, mouse movement etc., can be used for authentication purposes. These techniques are preferred over traditional approaches for various reasons:

- The user need not remember many passwords to work in different environments such as Social media, E-mail, E-learning, E-Commerce etc as in knowledge based authentication method.
- No need to carry any smart card or token as in possession-based authentication method.

Abstract- Nowadays, Big data is growing very faster in the world. Big data is the large volume of data that consists of both structured and unstructured on a day-to-day basis. But it's not the amount of data. Big data is the data which includes sensor data, biometric data, Geo-spatial, Healthcare, power grid, transport, search engine and in Social networks. Hadoop process large amounts of data, in parallel, clusters of commodity hardware in a reliable and fault-tolerant manner. In this paper we review the Image processing using Map reduce technique with the help of HIPI (the image processing Tool).

Keywords- Hadoop, Map reduce, Big data, Image Processing, HIPI

I. INTRODUCTION

Photo uploads are totally 300 million per day in the face book <sup>[1]</sup>. For Image processing In Big data uses several tools. Here we are expressing Hadoop Map reduce using HIPI.

1.1 Hadoop

Hadoop is an open source software framework, java based and processing for large data sets in the distributed environment <sup>[2]</sup>. Hadoop framework includes following four modules:

- Hadoop Distributed File System (HDFS™): A distributed file system that provides high-throughput
- Map Reduce: This is YARN-based system for parallel processing of large data sets.
- Hadoop Common: It is a collection Java libraries and utilities for supporting Hadoop modules.
- Hadoop YARN: This is a framework for job scheduling and cluster resource management.

1.2 MapReduce

Hadoop Map Reduce is used for process large amounts of data. The term Map Reduce performs two different types of tasks <sup>[2]</sup>.

The Map Task: In this task, it takes input data and converts the data. Then the individual elements are broken down into tuples (key/value pairs).

- The Reduce Task: The Reduce task gets the output from a map task as input and combines those data tuples into a smaller set of tuples. If the map task is over, the reduce task is performed <sup>[4]</sup>.

1.3 Hadoop Distributed File System

HDFS uses a master/slave architecture. The Master consists of a single Name Node that manages the file system metadata and one or more slave Data Nodes that store the actual data <sup>[5]</sup>. A file in an HDFS namespace is split into several blocks and those blocks are stored in a set of Data Nodes. The Name Node determines the mapping of blocks to the Data Nodes. The Data Nodes takes care of read and write operation with the file system. They also take care of block creation, deletion and replication based on instruction given by Name Node.

Fig: 1 Hadoop Architecture

II. HIPI (Hadoop Image Processing Interface)

HIPI (Hadoop Image Processing Interface) is an API library designed to provide efficient and high-throughput image processing in the Apache Hadoop Map Reduce parallel programming framework <sup>[6]</sup>. It also provides support for OpenCV.

This is designed to be used with the Apache Hadoop Map Reduce. HIPI is used for better performance image processing. It is functioning with Map Reduce style parallel

ABSTRACT

Knowledge management in higher educational institutions provides a set of practices for all the stakeholders (i.e. students, teachers, researchers, business and external entities), processes and technologies. This research is based on the knowledge creation practices for the teaching fraternity of the unaided arts and science colleges affiliated to Bharathiar University, Coimbatore, India. A total of 51 colleges is pure Arts and Sciences colleges, which are registered and affiliated to Bharathiar University. Out of this 51 colleges, a sample of 26 colleges was selected. Based on Fishers 't' test condition, a small sample of 30 respondents was selected from each college, that was summed to 720 teaching faculty. The study reveals that the teaching faculty perception regarding knowledge creation ranks recognition as the main factors to create knowledge and they believe that knowledge sharing results in enhancing expertise and providing opportunities for recognition. Knowledge sharing shall improve work processes in the institution and pave way for better institution development. There are always useful applications when knowledge is shared in the system and help in faculty development as well and institutional development.

ABSTRACT

Financial management mentions to the efficient and effective management of funds in such a manner as to achieve the objectives of the firm. It is the specialized function directly attendant with the top management. The importance of this function is not seen in the 'Line' but also in the capacity of the 'Staff' in overall of a company. It has been defined differently by different pundit in the field. The term typically applies to an firms or company's financial strategy, while personal finance or financial life management refers to an individual's management strategy. It incorporates how to raise the capital and how to allocate capital, i.e. capital budgeting. Not only for long term budgeting, but also how to allocate the short term resources like current liabilities. It also deals with the dividend policies of the shareholders.

1. Introduction

Finance is regarded as the lifeblood of every business Organization. This is because in the modern money-oriented economy, finance is one of the basic fundamentals of all kinds of economic activities. It is the master key which provides access to all the sources for being employed in manufacturing, promoting and trading activities. It has rightly been said that business necessity money to make more money. However, it's also true that money to gets more money only when it is properly engaged. Hence, effective management of even business venture is closely linked with efficient management of its finance.

In general, finance as the Reserve of money at the time it is needed. However, as a management function, it has a special meaning. Finance function may be defined as the procurement of funds and their effective utilization.

2. Definition for Finance

According to Paul.G.Hastings, "Finance is the management of the monetary affairs of a company". It includes determining what has to be paid for raising the money on the best terms available, and devoting available funds to the best uses."

According to Dr.AX.Kignshott, "Finance is the common denominator for vast range of corporate objectives, and the major part of any corporate plans must be expressed in financial terms".

3. Financial Analysis

In the financial management process, the primary stage in the process is a financial or review of the firm. Financial analysis is essentially the first step towards gaining a sound understanding of a business. Financial analysis is the evaluation of a firm's past; present foresee future financial performance and organization condition. Its objectives are to identify the firm's financial strengths and weakness and to provide the essential foundation for financial decision making and planning.

4. Business Finance

Business finance is that business activity, which is concerned with the acquisition and conservation of capital funds to meet financial requirement and overall objectives of a business enterprise.

Financial functions of a business may be stated as the procurements of funds and their effective utilization.

5. Scope of the Study

The study aims to measure the liquidity, solvency, efficiency, profit and growth of cement industries and identify the drawbacks which are of the indicators of the low performance of the industry. The result of the study may help the management of the industries in taking suitable decisions for better performance in future the optimum utilization of resources, efficient management of activities, control on the costs and expenses, and enhancement of productivity is essential for the survival of the organization. Based on the analysis, this study will provide valuable suggestion which will enable the companies to overcome its weakness and enhance its financial performance.

6. Objectives of the Study

- To estimate the trend in Sales and Profitability positions of the cement industries.
- To contribute recommendations for the development of cement industries.

ABSTRACT

In corporate finance capital structure is one of the basic for the organization and it has been main features for finance. From the olden days still this modern era capital structure is important for the investment and funding. In this economic life of the country especially developing country capital structure play very important role for all the manufacturing structure. It is very crucial decision to take how the manufacturing department chooses the capital structure from the scratch for this Modigliani and Miller irrelevance theorem will be helpful to take proper guidance. Customers cannot survive without products for that manufacturing industries is must; it's exporting and importing playing a biggest role in this world for this basic necessary one is capital structure. In this paper we can see about the impact in capital structure of the manufacturing industry.

ABSTRACT

Television advertisement is considered one of the most effective medium to influence the purchase decision of consumers. This study aims to analysis the influence of television advertisements on the buying behavior of children products. The data was obtained from the general public Coimbatore district. A sample of 150 questionnaires were circulated, recorded and compared. Results indicate that most of the respondents felt that they were influenced by food items and health drinks products advertisements were influence to buy those products. It is noticed that most of the respondents expressed that advertisement are entertaining and call to mind. The findings from the study depict that children products advertisements are successful in creating impact on buying behavior of the children products, particularly about the food items and health drinks. The customers are expecting much information from the short advertisements. It is suggested that the advertisement need to be more informative. It can be inferred that advertisements lead to the digital money transactions and created more awareness.

1. Introduction

Children's minds develop at a very fast rate and they are much faster at grasping and remembering information than adults. All the marketers and advertisers are also very well acquainted with this fact. Therefore, it can be find more and more advertisements on the television these days, which are targeting our young children for marketing their products. The advertisements that are broadcast between the children's shows promote all kinds of products like toys, food items, energy boosters, apparel brands, etc. Although, these advertisements are very short and on an average last for only 10-20 seconds on air, but their repetitive screening and specially their content and visuals have a very deep impact on the young. Their brains are easily influenced by what they see and hear. Also, children are now exposed to all the commercials, which the print media like newspapers, journals, etc. and social media are flooded with. Some television commercials which are made with a genuine intention to make children aware about the brand, without giving them any wrong messages, may actually be helpful for them. Because of such advertisements, children begin to recognise brands and they might sometimes even help their parents in making the decision about what to buy.

Albert Lasker, the father of advertising expressed that "Advertising is salesmanship in print". But he offered this definition long before television and internet, at a time when the nature and scope of advertising were quite limited. The London Institute of Practitioners in Advertising has given a definition which very closely approximates the following points: "Advertising presents the most persuasive possible selling message to right prospect for the product or service at the lowest possible cost". Consumer buying behavior is the sum total of a consumer's attitudes, preferences, intentions, and decisions regarding the consumer's behavior in the marketplace when purchasing a product or service. The study of consumer behavior draws upon social science disciplines of anthropology, psychology, sociology, and economics.

2. Review of Literature

Vasumathi, T (2018) attempted to examine the Advertisement impact on Parents buying behaviour of children products in Coimbatore City. It is indicated that though advertisements are amusing and entertaining, some of the parents were not convinced with the information provided or influenced by the celebrity endorsement which can be improved by effective advertisement measures. Celebrities shall choose the advertisement and only give the facts of the product information which may not excite the children to influence their parents to make purchase decisions. John, Chithira (2017) found the impact of television advertisements of on buying behaviour of children with reference to confectionery products such as chocolate, candies, chewing gum and cakes /pastries and the attributes advertisements inducing children and the health issues that occur in children. Udayakumar, K (2017) attempted to study on effect of advertisement on confectionary product with special reference to Vellore city. Advertising is a general term for and all forms of publicity, from the cry of the street boy selling newspapers to the most celebrate attention attracts device. The advertising has a stronger effect on younger children than the older children. Nowadays it seems that children's impact on family decision in shopping has been steadily increased.

Aggarwal, Vijita Singh (2016) attempted to find out the influence of children in family purchase decision process for different product categories: Durable products, Non durable and Child related products & services during different buying stages.

ABSTRACT

Making a truly eco-friendly product keeps both environmental and human safety in mind. At a minimum, the product is non-toxic. Other eco-friendly attributes include the use of sustainably grown or raised ingredients, produced in ways that do not deplete the ecosystem. This study confines its analysis only with regard to consumer satisfaction level towards eco-friendly products with the purpose of gaining a deeper understanding on it.

Keywords: Eco-friendly, Environmental, Non-toxic, Sustainable, Ecosystem.

INTRODUCTION

The term eco-friendly describes a product that is not hurtful to the environment. However, it can get more complex than that, as there are many factors of something that might be harmful to the environment. So many different things can negatively influence the environment, such as not using proper measures when disposing of products. Eco-friendly products may seem to be more expensive, but long-term they are actually more professional. Eco-friendly products tend to last much longer. These products are typically made from recycled materials and are sturdy, withstanding most drops, kicks, and dishwashers.

STATEMENT OF THE PROBLEM

The purpose of the study is to find out the level of satisfaction towards the environmental concern products. The main aim is to find out how the consumer behaves when they are about to purchase eco-friendly product. Are they looking for the products which are creating any problem to the environment or not creating any harm to the environment? And to find out the steps or actions what they have taken and motivated others to go for making no harm to the society or the environment.

OBJECTIVES OF THE STUDY

- To know the satisfaction level of eco-friendly product users.
- To know the environmental problems faced by the respondent.

RESEARCH METHODOLOGY

SAMPLE DESIGN:

The sampling design taken for the study is convenient sampling method.

TOOLS FOR ANALYSIS:

- Percentage Analysis
- Ranking

LIMITATIONS OF THE STUDY

- Availability of the information and data are limited by time factor.
- The study is conducted for a short period and so in depth analysis is not possible.

REVIEW OF LITERATURE

Kavita Kumara (2017) Green marketing is used for environment friendly products that are considered to be green like low power consuming electrical appliances, organic foods, lead free paints, recyclable paper, and phosphate free detergents. Companies are finding that consumers are willing to pay more for a green product. Green marketing in a broader sense is corporate social responsibility because it helps business to become a collectively responsible as well. In different research conducted in India High level of awareness about green marketing practices was found among the Indian consumers.

ABSTRACT

Medical information is normally not free from missing quantities and this is likewise obvious when information is gathered and tested through different clinical preliminaries. Existing Imputation methods don't address the issue of high dimensionality and apply separate capacities that additionally have the security of high dimensionality. There is a need to turn up with inventive methodologies and techniques for exact and efficient investigation of restorative records. This exploration proposes an enhanced imputation approach called IM-CBC (Imputation in CBC or Class-based bunching) and a classifier named as the Class-Based-Clustering Classifier (CBCC-IM). Tests are performed on benchmark datasets and the recorded outcomes utilizing IM-CBC imputation approach are contrasted with ten attribution approaches utilizing classifiers KNN, SVM and C4.5 and to the CBCC classifier utilizing Euclidean separation and fluffy Gaussian comparability capacities. Results got demonstrate that the execution of classifiers is enhanced or at least closer to the current methodologies. CBCC-IM classifier records most noteworthy exactness when compared to every other classifier on benchmark datasets, for example, Cleveland, Ecoli, Iris, Pima, Wine and Wisconsin.

Abstract – A vehicular ad-hoc network (VANET) presents wireless communication with vehicles and vehicles to road side kit's. In VANET the frequent path failures, the high mobility, frequently disconnected topology and network traffic density which may affect the reliability of data transmission and routing. These problems are solved using the UAV supported VANET architecture having U2V/V2U communication. Unmanned Aerial Vehicles (UAV), which can fly unconventionally or can be activated remotely without carrying any individual personnel. Unmanned Aerial Vehicles (UAVs) have been extensively used for several applications. Ad-hoc networking between UAVs (FANET- Flying Ad-hoc Networks) can crack the troubles happening from a fully infrastructure supported UAV networks [2]. This work presents various communication architectures based on various criteria. We have proposed decentralized multi-layer UAV ad-hoc network supported vehicular ad-hoc network architecture along with explore the system components. This work analyses and compares the various false data dissemination attacks and impact of those attacks on various architectures.

INTRODUCTION

A vehicular ad-hoc network presents wireless communication among vehicles and vehicles to road side kit's. In VANET the frequent path failures, the high mobility, frequently disconnected topology and network traffic density which may affect the reliability of data transmission and routing [1]. These problems are solved using the UAV supported VANET architecture having U2V/V2U communication. Unmanned Aerial Vehicles (UAV), which can fly freely or can be operated remotely of without carrying any individual workers. Ad-hoc networking between UAVs (FANET- Flying Ad-hoc Networks) can work out the troubles happening from a completely transportation based UAV networks [2].

Applications

UAVs have a great prospective to build numerous applications in both military and civilian domains.

A. Research Challenges

There are a multitude of challenges associated with UAV, solving which are crucial for safe and reliable employment of such systems in civilian and military scenarios. The following challenges have been identified as being threats to the use of UAV in VANET.

- Reliability
- Traffic density
- Communication among node's
- Conserving energy of a node
- Security. Security plays a major role in UAV to VANET communication

Significance of Architecture

- Provides overall network design.
- Reviews the IDS that safeguard the group's general systems and networked devices e.g. routers and switches.
- Identifies how the network is designed and implemented.
- Multi-layer architecture provides inbuilt elasticity for coping with development and/or changing traffic patterns and traffic mixes.
- Allows common transport arrangements for multi-services network.

Abstract. Unmanned Aerial Vehicles (UAV) systems are autonomous systems that can fly separately or it can be functioned remotely without carrying any individuals. These networks prone to various attacks. The people are benefited from the current growth of networking and cyber world; however, the rapid development of cyber world has furthermore contributed to immoral practices by persons who are using the technology to utilize others. That type of utilization of cyber world with the intention of accessing unauthorized or protected information, collapsing networks, spying, data and currency theft is called as cyber-attack. There is a tremendous increase in Cyber-attacks in number and complexity greater than the previous era, and also lack of awareness on cyber-attacks which has provided many people/societies/groups reveal the true to these attacks. The main aim of this study is to do a brief study of these cyber-attacks in order to create awareness about the various types of attacks and their action so that suitable security methods can be originated against such attacks and also this paper explores the impacts and parameters affected by the most dangerous cyber-attack namely, false data dissemination attack on UAV networks for further implementation and research.

1 Introduction

A vehicular ad-hoc network (VANET) provides wireless communication among vehicles and vehicles to road side equipment's. In VANET the frequent path failures, the high mobility, frequently disconnected topology and network traffic density which may affect the reliability of data transmission and routing [2]. These problems are solved using the UAV assisted VANET architecture having U2V/V2U communication. Unmanned Aerial Vehicles (UAV) systems are autonomous systems that can fly separately or it can be functioned remotely without carrying any individuals. UAVs are directly attach to satellites or ground control stations to handover the data. Multiple UAVs can form an ad-hoc network. UAV ad-hoc networks can solve the problems of
