Oxidative Stress

- Oxidative stress occurs when there is an excess of free radicals in the body's cells
- The body produces free radicals during normal metabolic processes
- However, cells also produce antioxidants that neutralize these free radicals
- In general, the body is able to maintain a balance between antioxidants and free radicals

Diagram: The diagram illustrates the process of oxidative stress. It starts with 'Oxygen consumption' leading to 'Free radicals'. 'Free radicals' cause 'Oxidative damage' to 'Lipids', 'Proteins', and 'DNA', which results in 'Impaired function' and 'Aging'. 'Antioxidants' are shown as a counterforce to 'Free radicals'. A callout box mentions: 'Genetic cells, proteins, and DNA, which can contribute to aging. It may also play a role in development of a range of health conditions, including diabetes, cancer, and neurodegenerative diseases such as Alzheimer's.' The video player interface shows the video is at 5:26 / 1:23:26.
